

Arguments on General Demurrer Not Finished

ATLANTA, March 6.—Arguments on a general demurrer to the receivership suit against the K. K. K., were not concluded today and will be taken up again tomorrow.

Counsel for the Klan contended that Henry H. Terrell and the other original petitioners had no case in that they had previously been expelled by the Klan and that the others who joined them in the suit should first appeal to the Klan's klondike or council.

Efforts of the petitioners to bring into court copies of telegrams relating to the Klan failed when Judge George B. Bell dissolved an order to that effect against the Western Union.

Two Negro Pistol Affairs; One Man Wounded

There were two negro shootings Sunday night, neither of which was fatal.

Herman Waddill was shot by Herbert Spencer in the Dog Level neighborhood, because, as Herman states, he found eight new dresses (evidently stolen) and some liquor under his house and was on the point of bringing the garments and contraband to the police headquarters when Waddill arbitrarily demanded that he drop his burden. Spencer says that he was a little slow and Waddill let him inspect the goods and then he shot three times at Spencer, one shot taking effect in the negro's right shoulder, causing a painful but not serious wound.

Sergeant Martin and Officers Bowles and Dameron answered the call and when they arrived they found that Waddill had vanished and, to date, he has not been arrested.

A little later the same officer received a call from the Southern Railway yards where another shooting had just occurred. On investigation it was found that Dock Hendricks and Will Hall had gotten into a quarrel, the exact cause of which could not be arrived at. The quarrel, however, led to Hendricks' pulling a gun, and a scuffle ensued for the weapon. During the struggle the gun was fired, hitting no one. Hall finally secured the pistol and threatened to shoot man nearby. Hendricks was taken in custody and is now in jail.

Hawaiian Entertainers Please Large Audiences

A program which has been seldom excelled at the Majestic in its line occupies the boards at that playhouse this week. Besides a splendid tabloid show, Albert Vierra's Hawaiian company is here for the entire week as a special added attraction. Combined, the two shows afford a program that is well worth seeing. The present is a return engagement for the Hawaiian players. They appeared here last season and their popularity on that occasion is responsible for the return date.

The persistent applause of the large audience last night was evidence enough that the performance pleased. A varied program of steel guitar and ukulele playing and singing and dancing brings applause after each number. Besides, the soothing melodies of the string instruments.

A repetition of yesterday's program will be given today matinee and night, with complete changes tomorrow and Friday.

Motor Truck Afire, Firemen Called Out

The Patton street fire department was called out yesterday afternoon at 5:55 o'clock in response to an alarm turned in from box number 17. The cause of the alarm was a truck belonging to Smith Feed and Seed Co., which was found to be on fire.

The motor truck was coming down Main street when the fire started. The driver noticed that flames were spurting from the opening at the gear shift. He became alarmed and suddenly pulled the emergency brake back with a jerk and had abandoned the machine before it had time to come to a halt. The danger was soon removed by the firemen who used chemical. What caused the fire is unknown. The damage was slight, the truck resuming the trip under its own power.

Escapes Sentence Only Temporarily

NEW ORLEANS, March 6.—City Commissioner of Safety Stanley W. Ray, escaped temporarily a sentence of 48 hours imprisonment for contempt of court late today when Justice Ben C. Dawkins of the State Supreme court granted him a writ of prohibition restraining enforcement of the sentence imposed by Judge Richard Dowling in district criminal court earlier in the day.

Commissioner Ray, superintendent of Police Guy Molony and other police officials, were summoned to appear before Judge Dowling this afternoon for their failure to release Harry Ashton and Phillip Bloomfield, convicted on a minor charge in a municipal recorder's court, and ordered paroled yesterday by Judge Dowling. The police superintendent and his assistants were released, but the commissioner was declared guilty because of his orders to city court and police officials to prevent the release of the prisoner.

Attorneys who obtained the stay of sentence contended that Judge Dowling was without authority over the recorder's court in these particular cases inasmuch as a parole had not been denied by the municipal court and that the only manner in which he could have had jurisdiction was in the failure of the recorder to act.

IMPORT DUTY OF 7 CENTS ON STAPLE COTTON ACCEPTED

WASHINGTON, March 6.—An import duty of 7 cents a pound on long staple cotton—the figure in the emergency tariff law—is understood to have been agreed upon today by Republican members of the Senate Finance committee who are rewriting the Fordney tariff bill. Some committee members were said to have insisted upon a rate of 10 cents and gave notice that they would carry their fight to the Senate floor.

In presenting their program for duties on farm products, senators of the Republican farm tariff bloc, asked for a rate of 15 cents a pound and their support in the Senate is being courted upon by committee proponents of the duty of 10 cents.

Long staple cotton is grown largely in Arizona, New Mexico and southern California.

VETERANS ASK HARDING TO ATTEND ENCAMPMENT

An effort is being made to have the President here at that time, and to put on a naval review and regatta, as a part of the encampment program. The Seattle chapter of Commerce is lending its support to the completion of the encampment plans and is sending to the 1,000 points of the organization literature describing the Pacific Northwest. Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy and other national men who have been active in the interests of the encampment, are among those to whom invitations are being sent.

MAN SHE PICKS BALKS AT BEING FIFTH HUSBAND

Boston Society Now Wonders How Mrs. Walker Will Use New License.

BOSTON, March 7.—Her wedding all planned for today and no bridegroom!

That is the embarrassing situation with which Mrs. Florence Walker, much-married Boston society woman, is confronted.

When Mrs. Walker obtained a marriage license in the Boston city clerk's office last week she is said to have named as her choice a fifth husband, Elwood B. Waugh.

Waugh, whom Mrs. Walker described tersely as "divine," has started the Hub City's social circles on the eve of the planned wedding with the announcement that he has no intention of marrying her and that he had nothing to do with getting the license.

He said:

"The whole thing has taken me by surprise. Of course, I have known Mrs. Walker a long time and I find her a charming woman, but the idea of marriage has never occurred to me. If it has occurred to her I naturally can't help it."

He declared he has not thought of marrying since he got a divorce from his former wife ten years ago, a broken romance, which, he says, has made him decidedly pessimistic on the subject.

Mutual friends are keyed up to an exciting pitch today, waiting for Mrs. Walker's next move. Whether she will allow such a minor consideration as the hesitancy of the prospective bridegroom to interfere with her marital plans is the subject for much lively conjecture.

After being balked four times in her search for marital happiness, will she quietly let all out of her hands the man in whom she declares she has found the ideal mate?

That is what remains to be seen.

Mrs. Walker, in an interview, has defined the "ideal" husband as a man who is a gentleman first of all; then a good worker; and third, a one-man man."

She said:

"He should have no ideas but of his wife after he marries her. Money doesn't count. It is better for a girl to marry a dirt digger than be an old man's pampered darling. Furthermore, the ideal husband (as well as the ideal wife) should want children."

"Have you ever despaired of finding a man in whom you would not be disappointed?" she asked decisively.

"No," she replied. "Men are all right. If they're bad, women can blame themselves for it. Women tempt men. Men aren't bad at heart. They're simply human."

"Of course, I have had disappointing experiences, especially with two of my husbands, but I have never judged men as a whole by them. In my search for the ideal husband I have tried old and young, rich and poor."

SEVEN MOTHERS JOIN DAUGHTERS AT UNIVERSITY

LINCOLN, Neb., March 6.—Seven Nebraska mothers, carrying from four to ten credit hours, have become the schoolmates of their daughters at the University of Nebraska. In the case of two of the mothers it is the realization of a girlhood ambition to attend college. The others are enrolled for individual purposes, one to learn American ideals, another to study modern student life, and still another to theorize.

Mrs. U. C. Brecht is the mother of three children all girls, and now her classmates. The entire family is studying dairy and animal husbandry. Mrs. Emma J. Kosch, frequently mistaken for sisters in university circles, Mrs. Kosch is a sophomore, and besides, has two step-daughters in college. Art, renaissance history and economics are found on Mrs. Kosch's card.

Mrs. Frederick Lau received her higher education in a German institution. So she entered the university with her two daughters to "be with Americans and learn their ideals."

Philosophy, art, history, federal administration and kindred subjects draw the mothers of four other students to the university. Two of these mothers report it "rather hard to get back into the swing of school work—there is so much to unlearn that we learned before." These mothers report a change in theories—but to their liking.

These seven mothers are regularly enrolled students.

Feagin Betrays Guilt When He Is Halted In Car

Leading criminologists contend that a large majority of criminals betray themselves even before the finger of suspicion is pointed their way.

Marion Feagin, of Spry, N. C., tried to get away with a Ford runabout, the possession of another man, a groceryman of Stokesland, last night and he caused Schoolfield officers stopped him to question as to why he was not burning a rear light, he lost his nerve and blurted out, "If you'll just let me go I'll tell you the whole story."

The officers told him to "come clean," and Feagin told them of seeing a Ford runabout in front of a grocery store in Stokesland that attracted his eye. He got in it, drove off—and ran into the officers. He is now in jail, charged with larceny of an automobile.

The arrest of Feagin was made by Chief Cole and Officer Rogers of the Schoolfield force.

MONSTER LONG THOUGHT EXTINCT HAS BEEN FOUND

BUENOS AIRES, March 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—Belief that a prehistoric monster, an amphibian to exist only in fossil form, is still alive in Patagonia was expressed today by Prof. Clementi Onelli, director of the Buenos Aires Zoological Garden. He announced that he had received credible reports that such a monster was seen in a lake in the territory of Chubut, near the Andes mountains.

Prof. Onelli made public a letter from an English friend named Sheffield, saying that while hunting in the Andes he discovered a trail of flattened vegetation near a lake, indicating the track of an animal of enormous weight. Later, the letter, Mr. Sheffield saw in the middle of the lake an animal, with a colossal neck like that of a swan, whose movements in the water indicated that the body was shaped like a crocodile. He said harpoons would be necessary to capture the monster.

Prof. Onelli said this evidence confirmed two previous reports that such an animal had been seen alive during the last year in the same region, where various scientific expeditions have made rich finds of animals of geological ages. He said an expedition from Argentina or some other country should be sent to capture the animal.

Kills Stepfather Shoots Mother

Suffolk and Surrounding County Horrified at Tragedy—Wounded Woman Tells Story.

SUFFOLK, March 7.—Peter P. Knight, a prominent farmer of Nansemond county and native of Gates county, N. C., is dead, and his wife, Mrs. P. P. Knight, formerly Mrs. B. C. Griffin, of the White Marsh road, Nansemond county, lies seriously wounded at Lakeview Hospital, the result of bullets fired from a gun in the hands of Mrs. Knight's son, Courtney Griffin.

The tragedy has horrified the city and county. The prominence of all the persons connected with the shooting has made it the subject of all street talk today.

Courtney Griffin, son of the late B. C. Griffin, and a well-to-do farmer of Nansemond county, is now in the county jail charged with the murder of Peter P. Knight.

Mrs. Knight, with six bullet wounds in the lower limbs, made the following statement in the presence of Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., pastor of the Suffolk Christian church:

"Mr. Knight, to whom I was married February 22, 1922, arose this (Saturday) morning at our home on the White Marsh road at 5:15 o'clock and made a fire in the kitchen stove and dressed and went into the kitchen at a quarter of six and Mr. Knight was sitting by the fire.

"He waited a minute, and said, 'Well, I'll go out and feed up.' He opened the kitchen door, leading out on our back porch, with his left hand in his pocket. As he opened the door, my son, Courtney Griffin, leveled a pistol at Mr. Knight, and without a word except mumbled curses, began to shoot.

"Mr. Knight cried out one time, 'O Lord, help me,' and then I ran out on the porch. The kitchen was in total darkness as Courtney had either shot out the light or blown it out. As I started out, he either pushed me down or shot me so that I fell and when I found myself I was lying on the floor of the porch, shot and bleeding.

"Mr. Knight was lying on the kitchen floor, moaning for help. Courtney, when he had shot us both, left. I crawled out on my hands and knees across the muddy yard into the lot and into the field. The rain falling in deluges and the darkness and pain something awful.

"I tried to get to the house of a colored man named Bullock, a tenant on my farm. I could not make him hear, though I cried and cried. I began to get light. I looked down in the corn row and saw streaks of my own blood staining the water as it flowed past me. 'O God,' I thought, 'help me to get help.'

"Finally Bullock came out. He sent his boy, Luther, who works on my place, for Mr. A. H. Hines and his sons, my neighbors. They came quickly, and put me in a wheelbarrow and carried me back to my house and put me on the lounge in my sitting room. I thought surely I would freeze if it was so cold as this.

"Mr. Hines telephoned to Suffolk for physicians, and the ambulance from Lakeview Hospital came out with Dr. Gay in charge. I kept telling them to look after Mr. Knight. They put some pillows under his head. I heard him say: 'Well, no one help a dying man.' They took us both, after wrapping us in warm blankets, to Lakeview Hospital."

Mrs. Knight was asked when the marriage between her and Mr. Knight took place.

"We were married at Gatesville, February 22, by the Rev. Mr. Horner."

Mrs. Knight declared that the tragedy was premeditated on the part of her son, Courtney Griffin, and that he was angry over the will made by his father, B. C. Griffin, who died August 30, 1921.

In this will Mr. Griffin left his estate to his widow in fee simple. Mrs. Knight's composure under the terrible circumstances when she herself faced death from bullet wounds, and her husband of two weeks lay dead in the next room from the hand of her son, was remarkable.

She has a sweet manner and quiet voice and talked in a convincing and earnest manner, with no hint of hysteria or excitement.

When asked as to the motives for the double crime, she said: "It is his determination to have the money at any price."

Mrs. Knight told of instances of how, since the death of Mr. Griffin, Courtney Griffin's father, he had demanded money or that she would sign notes again and again, until she was afraid to live on the farm any longer without protection. She said that after the death of Mr. Knight's mother some weeks ago, she decided to marry him. They went to Gatesville on February 22 and the ceremony was there performed.

She spoke highly of her husband's character, telling that he was kind and of good habits, and that she had to have a protector. Mr. Knight was 40 years old and Mrs. Knight a few years older.

Chow! Yells Ma-Cat; Kittens and Baby Rats Also Fall In

CLARENDON, March 7.—In real life paraphrase the well-known lamb has laid down with the equally pressed agent lion. And it all happened right here in Clarendon.

Ben Mori, Clarendon's man-about-town, janitor at the engine house, and a prominent authority on natural history, has the real live goods to exhibit as proof of the latest modern miracle mentioned above.

Ben has a pet cat in the engine house, which recently increased kitten life by six. Up in the eaves a mamma rat also gave to the world five little rattlings.

Casting about for food recently, Mamma Kitty came upon Mamma Rat, who was on a like expedition, with the result that the latter isn't any more.

Ben, desiring to rid himself of the rattlings, placed them with the newly arrived kittens.

But, lo! Instead of an extinguished rodent family, Mamma Kitty adopted them all and now feeds them with her own.

Ben says he doesn't know so much about nature as he thought he did.

Grand Jury
Revokes Order
Against Jailor

Among the number were four against Sime Ellis, negro, charged with stealing watches and other articles from employees of the Southern railway. Yesterday, after the indictments had been returned, Ellis pleaded guilty on all the counts. On counts one, two and three he received one year in the penitentiary on each. On count No. 4 he received two years, making a five-year sentence that the negro will have to serve.

Clay Walker, negro, indicted on a grand larceny charge, pleaded guilty and was sentenced by court to 12 months in jail, the charge being changed to one of petty larceny.

J. T. Jackson, negro, charged with grand larceny in the indictment, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary on each. On count No. 4 he received two years, making a five-year sentence that the negro will have to serve.

John Stone, negro, grand larceny. Louise Williams, negro, robbery. The woman is charged with holding up and robbing J. T. Smith of $11 in money.

Five true bills were returned against Mrs. W. A. Denton for violation of the Mapp act.

Just before the grand jury adjourned for the evening the following true bills were returned: Elsiea Fointexter, violation of the Mapp act; Walter Jennings, Mapp act, second offense.

No true bill was returned against Henry Divins, negro, charged with attempted criminal assault upon a young white girl in Schoolfield recently.

The only true bill charging murder was returned against W. H. Blanketship for the murder of Giles Walker on January 8.

Killing Woodpecker

LYNCHBURG, March 6.—The violation of a federal statute made to carry out the terms of a treaty in force between the United States and Canada is charged in an information filed in the federal court here by Thomas J. Muncy, United States district attorney, against W. A. Moon, of Sprou Springs. The specific information which will be placed before Federal Judge McDowell at the July term of federal court is that Mr. Moon, on November 6, 1920, killed a common, red-headed woodpecker. Mr. Moon admits his guilt and pleads ignorance of the law. The violation came to light when Mr. Moon sent the bird to a taxidermist to be mounted.

Under the terms of the treaty the following birds are protected by federal statute:

"Water fowl, including brant, wild ducks, geese, cranes, including little brown sandhill and whooping cranes, rails, including sora, gallinules and snipe and other rails; shore birds, including avocets, curlew, dowitchers, godwits, knots, oyster catchers, phalaropes, plovers, sandpipers, snipe, woodcock and yellow legs pigeons, including doves and wild pigeons, bobolinks, catbirds, chickadees, cuckoos, flickers, grosbeaks, hummingbirds, kinglets, martins, meadow larks, night hawks or bull bats, orioles, robins, shrikes, swallows, swifts, warblers, waxwings, whippoorwills, woodpeckers and wrens and all other perching birds which feed entirely or chiefly on insects; auks, auklets, butternuts, fulmars, kittiwakes, gulls, jaegers, gulls, hawks, herons, jacks, loons, mergansers, petrels, puffins, shearwaters and terns."

Psychologist Says
Science Is Not a Patent Medicine

SYRACUSE, March 7.—"Psychology is not a patent medicine." This is the dictum issued by Dr. Mark A. May, head of the department of psychology, Syracuse University, in defense of the science, which is the victim of an ever-increasing number of fakes, fads and quack practices.

"There is a general idea current," says Dr. May, "to the effect that, when everything else has failed, psychology is a cure for all ills. The science of psychology is the study of human nature. If what some of these self-styled psychologists teach is psychology, then what teach is something else."

Following is a list of the things which Dr. May says psychology is not:

1. A study of the mysterious, occult and spooky.

2. Psychic research.

3. Mind reading or fortune telling.

4. Mental telegraphy.

5. An attempt to explain the psychological wonders that appear in vaudeville.

6. Study of palm reading or pumps on the head.

Robbers Offered Missionary $12,000

ST. LOUIS, March 6.—Dr. Albert Leroy Shelton, a medical missionary of the Christian Church, killed Feb. 17 last by bandits near Butang, China, had been offered $12,000 a year salary by the chief of a robber band, who had held the missionary prisoner in 1920, if he would become minister to the robbers, according to speakers at a memorial service here last night.

Dr. Shelton escaped from the band. Tributes were paid to Dr. Shelton's work in West China and Tibet. Word of the missionary's death was received here yesterday.

Sentence Is Suspended.

In the case of Charlie Mangum, young white boy, charged with breaking into the Climax Barber Shop January 22, a plea of guilty was entered and Mangum was sentenced to pay a fine of $5 and costs and serve 12 months in jail. The sentence was suspended and Mangum was given into the charge of H. E. Ferguson as special probation officer.

Five true bills were returned against Mrs. W. A. Denton for violation of the Mapp act.

Just before the grand jury adjourned for the evening the following true bills were returned: Elsiea Fointexter, violation of the Mapp act; Walter Jennings, Mapp act, second offense.

No true bill was returned against Henry Divins, negro, charged with attempted criminal assault upon a young white girl in Schoolfield recently.

It is believed he will retain the leadership until the Irish legislation is completed and possibly until the Geneva conference.

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbe Compound and 1-4 ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at a very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."—adv.

BOSTON, Mass., March 7.—The sixteen-year-old girl of today has the sophisticated look of a woman of 40 instead of the winsomeness that gave rise to the expression "sweet sixteen," the Rev. Eva Ryerson Ludgate asserted in a discourse yesterday at the Ruggles Street Baptist church.

"The twentieth century girl is a most fascinating and wonderful creature," she said, "in spite of bobbed hair, short skirts and low necked dresses. But the girls of today are losing their bloom. It is the fault of the mothers."

Drive To Make Russia Clean

MOSCOW, March 7.—Leon Trotsky, the Soviet war minister, has launched a campaign to make Russia clean. He intends to do this through the Red army.

It is his chief and most cherished desire to convert 100,000,000 people to his slogan: "Cleanliness is health and with health the world may be moved."

Trotsky has banished grease and dirt, beards and long hair, shabby and ill-fitting clothes from the Red army and now he wants to pass on the benefits to cleanliness to the entire population. Personally, he gives the Russians a splendid example.

Trotsky's own clothes are a model of simplicity and neatness. He wears no insignia to show he is the commander-in-chief of the army. His jacket is of gray green army cloth, with a military air given by a closely buttoned, roll-down collar, and military pockets. His trousers are tucked into a pair of lace half-boots.

A square medium-sized man, his large head and broad forehead would attract attention of the observing in many places but his clean appearance is notable in Russia where living conditions have long induced to neglect of one's appearance.

Trotsky claims that despite great strain of work he has been under for four years his health has improved. He certainly has improved in control of his nerves. He no longer gets excited. Also, he has become a first-rate public speaker.

His close leaders have to do their work at night sleep when they can and make stump speeches to a vast number of people who cannot read and who are taught only by speeches. Instead of breaking down, Trotsky often speaks twice a day. He goes through setting-up exercises twice a day, walks or rides in an open automobile when he has the opportunity, gets regular sleep and never worries.

Trotsky is very keen at picking up points in conversation, to controvert arguments advanced but so quick that he is almost quizzical. He argues like a country lawyer, was the opinion expressed by some European journalists recently, after interviewing him.

Pope Delirious During Last Days

ROME, March 7.—Some incidents of the last two days of the illness of the late Pope Benedict XV have just become known. At intervals he was delirious and these were followed by periods of lucidity. He talked to the prelates at his bedside about various subjects so widely different with so little pause between them that they were unable always to discern whether he was in full possession of his faculties.

A few minutes after he had told Professor Battistini "I would gladly give my life for the peace of the world," he turned to Cardinal Gasparri and said: "One of my greatest regrets upon leaving this earth is that I shall not live to see the completion of the statue to Rampaola, my great master."

At another moment, evidently thinking of his nephew, Della Chiesa, who had insisted upon seeing the pope in spite of his own serious illness, he kept repeating: "Poor boy, poor boy, who knows whether he has enough money to pay the cab to bring him here." The Della Chesas are considered to be fairly well-to-do.

The pope had taken the initiative last year of having a statue erected in the Vatican grounds to Cardinal Rampaola, had examined the plans and drawing himself and often called to watch the sculptor at his work.

Illinois Leads In Electricity

CHICAGO, March 6.—Illinois leads the United States in the number of homes lighted by electricity, with California ranking second and New York third, according to the National Electric Light Association, which has announced the results of a survey of the residential lighting situation of the country.

During 1921 the number of electric light and power residential customers in the country increased 1,901,700, bringing the total up to 8,467,000. In addition to the residential lighting customers, the electric light and power industry has 1,500,000 industrial and commercial lighting customers and 407,600 industrial and commercial power customers bringing the total number up to 10,375,200.

Illinois has 854,000 of the residential customers. California ranks second in home lighting customers with 752,000 while New York is third with 686,000 and Pennsylvania fourth with 543,000.

The survey shows that the middle western states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin have more homes lighted with electricity than any other section of the country, the total being 2,237,800 or a quarter of the members of the entire country. The total number of new home-lighting customers added in these five states in 1921 was 283,800.

It is estimated, says the announcement of the national association in commenting on the total new customers in the nation, "that of these new customers 300,000 are in residential quarters built during 1921, and the remainder, approximately 700,000 in old residential quarters which were added during 1921."

Today 14,467 cities and communities in the United States are being served by electric light and power companies. The actual total fixed investment in these companies is $4,600,000,000, with a gross income of $923,550,000 annually. During 1921 these companies used 38,000,000 tons of coal, 13,250,000 barrels of fuel oil and 25,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

"The output of electrical energy during 1921 totaled 43,100,000,000 kilowatt hours, of which 28,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of energy was derived from fuel and 15,100,000,000 of energy was derived from water power.

"The electric light and power industry has 250,000 employees.

"In the United States are 5,654 operating companies, of which 3,662 are privately owned, with a total of 1,600,000 stockholders. The privately-owned companies generate slightly more than 97 per cent of the total electrical energy produced in this country."

Newspapermen To View Paris Styles

PARIS, March 7.—That little world of its own in Paris which has to do exclusively with the creation of women's clothing has been thrown into a high state of excitement through the recent "radical" departure of one of its leading members in the news papermen to view his spring and summer dresses.

In doing so the dressmaker smashed a tradition as old as the Paris dress-making business itself which has always boasted of the fact that it needed no newspaper to assist it to greatness.

The representatives of the press have been rigorously barred heretofore and many of the big establishments whose names are well known to American women have gone so far as to demand a special passport with a picture from all those who entered their establishments. Those few special fashion writers who have obtained admission were made to believe they had been highly honored.

Jean Patou, a young Frenchman with American ideas decided recently that his associates were wrong. He, therefore, arranged a special party, invited all the best-known newspapermen in Paris—foreign and French—and revealed to them the secrets of his art. Anyone was free to carry away a careful description of the fashions displayed.

Patou's move has caused great discussion in the Paris fashion world and there is much speculation as to whether it will force other dressmakers to open their doors to the press. Many well-known houses which have felt the pinch of recent hard times are wondering whether they are wrong.

Swedish Banks To Back Russ Trade

STOCKHOLM, March 7.—Leading Swedish banks are understood to be attempting to form a pool with a capital stock of $3,000,000 to promote Swedish trade with Russia by the purchase of Russian natural products.

Stockholm's leading conservative daily, the NYA DAGBLATT ALLEHANDA, asserts that there is no doubt that the project is under way and that the Swedish financiers seriously contemplate establishing a central bank in Moscow through which trade with Russia can be carried on for cash payments in gold and silver.

It is believed here that the Swedish bankers intended in this way to meet the efforts of American corporations to open trade with Russia.

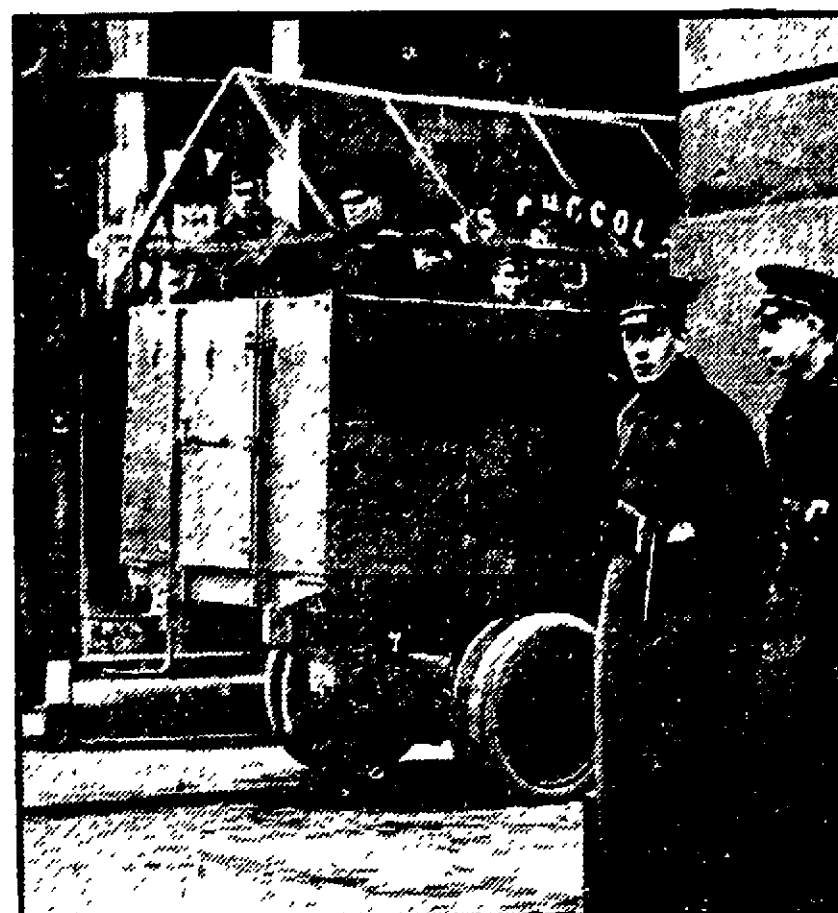

It is understood that under this Swedish plan Russian products are to be delivered to large central warehouses in Russia whose security will be guaranteed by the Russian government. Warehouse certificates are to be negotiable in the proposed central bank and will be available as security for bank credits or as means of payment for merchandise. This method of procedure has been thoroughly approved by experts in Russian trade.

The primary problem to be solved at the present time is how to stimulate Russian production, chiefly agriculture. It is well known that the Russian peasants have long since lost all interest in Russian paper rubles, and have refused to accept them in payment for their products. Thus the only way of purchasing agricultural and other products in Russia at present is by barter.

The peasants will accept such necessities as matches, tobacco, tea, tiles and agricultural implements for their farm products and such things they cannot buy with Russian paper rubles. It is believed here that such a project as that of the Swedish banks will not only spur the Russian peasants to plan larger crops than at present but will counteract the depressing effects of Russia's utterly deflated currency.

Still Search For Missing Trio

DETROIT, March 6.—Police of Detroit and Canadian border cities tonight redoubled their efforts to locate Ray, Reese and his associates. His two young sons, Fred and Ray, were in a serious condition from shock. Reese disappeared after the boys after telling his wife he was and that he intended to do "bad" with them to make her suffer. He had been told that he had not taken his own life and that of the boys in Detroit River was supposed to be their today police said, when Reese, hat and several boxes addressed to him were found on the river bank. As the spot where the boys were found had been carefully searched Saturday, the authorities announced their belief that Reese had later been told the articles there to strengthen the suicide theory.

Contents of the letters were withheld from the public but it was said thatable clues as to these boys' whereabouts had been obtained.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Illinois leads the United States in the number of homes lighted by electricity, with California ranking second and New York third, according to the National Electric Light Association, which has announced the results of a survey of the residential lighting situation of the country.

During 1921 the number of electric light and power residential customers in the country increased 1,167,700, bringing the total up to 3,467,600. In addition to the residential lighting customers, the electric light and power industry has 1,500,000 industrial and commercial lighting customers and 407,600 industrial and commercial power customers bringing the total number up to 5,375,200.

Illinois has 553,000 of the residential customers. California ranks second in home lighting customers with 752,000, while New York is third with 686,900 and Pennsylvania fourth with 543,000.

The survey shows that the middle western states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin have more homes lighted with electricity than any other section of the country, the total being 2,237,300 or a quarter of the members of the entire country.

The total number of new homes lighting customers added in these five states in 1921 was 283,800. "It is estimated," says the announcement of the national association in commenting on the total new customers in the nation, that of these new customers 260,000 are in residential quarters built during 1921, and the remainder, approximately 700,000 in old residential quarters which were wired during 1921.

Today 14,467 cities and communities in the United States are being served by electric light and power companies. The actual total fixed investment in these companies is $4,600,000,000, with a gross income of $233,950,000 annually. During 1921 these companies used 38,000,000 tons of coal, 12,250,000 barrels of fuel oil and 25,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

The output of electrical energy during 1921 totaled 43,100,000,000 kilowatt hours, of which 26,000,000,000,000 of energy was derived from fuel and 17,100,000,000 of energy was derived from water power.

The electric light and power industry has 250,000 employees. "In the United States are 5,554 operating companies, of which 3,662 are privately owned, with a total of 1,600,000 stockholders. The privately-owned companies generate slightly more than 97 per cent of the total electrical energy produced in this country."

Newspapermen To View Paris Styles

PARIS, March 7.—That little world of its own in Paris which has to do exclusively with the creation of women's clothing has been thrown into a high state of excitement through the recent "radical" departure of one of its leading members in inviting newspapermen to view his spring and summer dresses.

In doing so the dressmaker smashed a tradition as old as the Paris dress-making business itself which has always boasted of the fact that it needed no newspaper to assist it to greatness.

The representatives of the press have been rigorously barred heretofore and many of the big establishments whose names are well known to American women have gone so far as to demand a special passport with a picture from all those who entered their establishments. Those few special fashion writers who have obtained admission were made to believe they had been highly honored.

Jean Patou, a young Frenchman with American ideas, decided recently that his associates were wrong. He, therefore, arranged a special party, invited all the best-known newspapermen in Paris—foreign and French—and revealed to them the secrets of his art. Anyone was free to carry away a careful description of the gowns displayed.

Patou's revelations have caused great discussion in the Paris fashion world and there is much speculation as to whether it will force other dressmakers to open their doors to the press. Many well-known houses which have felt the pinch of recent hard times are wondering whether they are wrong.

Swedish Banks To Back Russ Trade

STOCKHOLM, March 7.—Leading Swedish banks are understood to be attempting to form a pool with a capital stock of $38,000,000 to promote Swedish trade with Russia by the purchase of Russian natural products.

Stockholm's leading conservative daily, the NYA DAGBLIGT ALLEMAN, asserts that there is no doubt that the project is under way and that the Swedish financiers seriously contemplate establishing a central bank in Moscow through which trade with Russia can be carried out for cash payments in gold and silver.

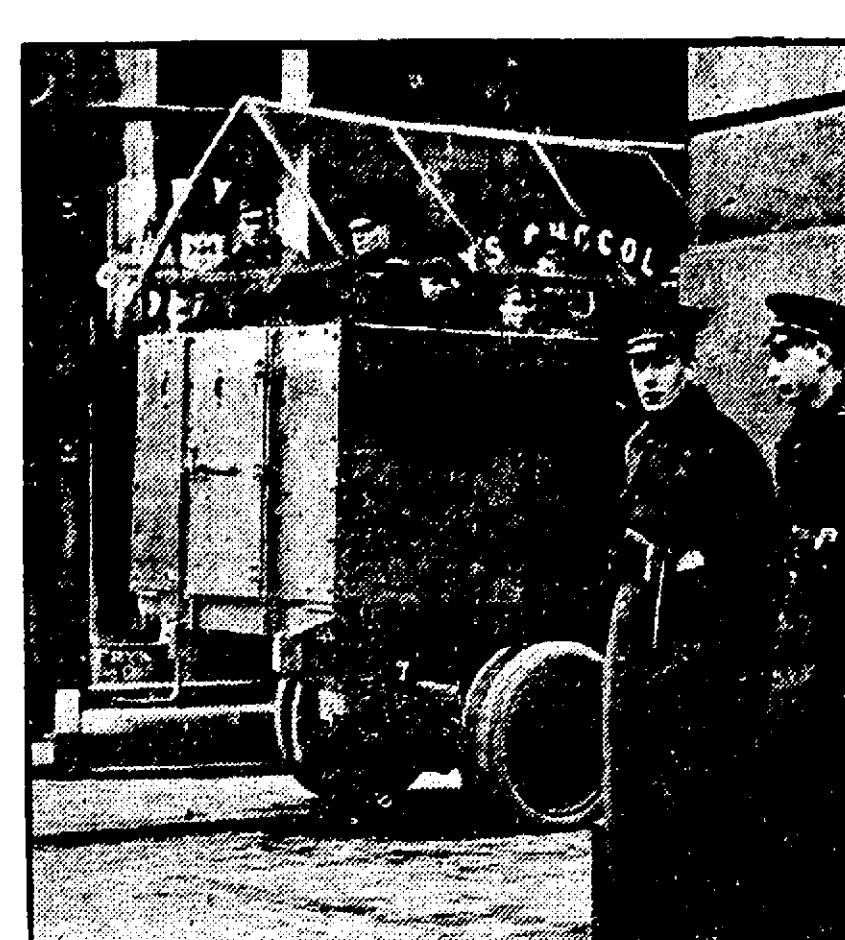

It is believed here that the Swedish bankers intended in this way to meet the efforts of American corporations to open trade with Russia. It is understood that, under this Swedish plan, Russian products are to be delivered to large central warehouses in Russia whose security will be guaranteed by the Russian government. Warehouse certificates are to be negotiable in the proposed central bank and will be available as security for bank credits or as means of payment for merchandise. This method of procedure has been thoroughly approved by experts in Russian trade.

The primary problem to be solved at the present time is how to stimulate Russian production, chiefly agriculture. It is well known that the Russian peasants have long since lost all interest in Russian paper rubles, and have refused to accept them in payment for their products. Thus the only way of purchasing agricultural and other products in Russia at present is by barter.

The peasants will accept such necessities as matches, tobacco, textiles and agricultural implements for their farm products and such things they cannot buy with Russian paper rubles. It is believed here that such a project as that of the Swedish banks will not only spur the Russian peasants to plan larger crops than at present but will counteract the depressing effects of Russia's utterly deflated currency.

Chile Is Given Coastwise Shipping

SANTIAGO, Chile, March 7.—Coastwise shipping between Chilean ports, excepting Punta Arenas, will be reserved exclusively to Chilean vessels after January 1, 1922, under a law just passed by Congress after a long debate. The national mercantile marine fleet becomes a part of the naval reserve and may be expropriated in time of war.

Supporters of the measure look upon it as a necessity to save the national shipping lines from financial ruin in face of foreign competition.

Still Search For Missing Trio

DETROIT, March 6.—Police of Detroit and Canadian border cities tonight redoubled their efforts to locate Ray, Besse, disappeared with his two young sons Friday, after reports from physicians that Mrs. Besse was in a serious condition from shock. Besse disappeared with the boys after telling his wife, it is said, that he intended to "do away with them to make her suffer."

Belief that Besse had not taken his own life and that of the boys in Detroit River was strengthened further today, police said, when Besse's last and second letters addressed to him were found on the river bank. As the spot where they were found had been carefully searched Saturday, the authorities announced their belief that Besse might have played the suicide theory.

Contents of the letters were withheld by the police, but it was said valuable clues as to Besse's whereabouts had been obtained.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., March 6.—Seven buildings at the Plattsburg barracks were destroyed by fire early this morning. One hour after the flames were discovered the fire department, assisted by approximately 1,000 soldiers, still were combating the flames, which at that time threatened the hospital and one soldier had been overcome by smoke and another was reported to be missing.

SLAIN BY REJECTED SUITOR.

FREDERICK, Md., March 6.—Summoned from her seat at the family table, where a meal was in progress, Miss Arta Jenkins, 17 years old, was shot and killed today by Harvey Gartrell, who, according to the police, was a rejected suitor.

Gartrell is said to have attempted suicide, but inflicted only a scalp wound upon himself and, recovering, fled in an automobile. The machine was founded later, abandoned, a short distance from Frederick. Searching parties found no trace of Gartrell.

DUEL IS DECLARED OFF.

PARIS, March 6.—Louis Latzarus, retiring editor-in-chief of the Figaro, will not insist upon fighting a duel with Alfred Capus, the present editor, to obtain satisfaction for an article published by the newspaper under its present management. Threats that such a duel might be fought caused considerable interest here during the past week, but the second, announced by the two editors have examined the article to which M. Latzarus took exception, and have agreed it was of a general character and did not attack the honor or personality of the former editor.

A YOUNG MAN'S SHOCKING CRIME.
A horrible domestic tragedy is reported from Suffolk, Va., last Saturday in which Courtney Griffin is charged with the murder of his stepfather, Peter B. Knight and the wounding of his mother, Mrs. Knight, whom he tried to kill, shooting her six times. The shocking homicide is attributed to resentment by the young man of the marriage of his mother to Knight after a widowhood of only about six months, and the further fact that the elder Griffin, father of the slayer and first husband of Mrs. Knight, had cut off the boy, Courtney, brooding over what he regarded as his wrongs, had evidently premeditated his crime, for he suddenly appeared in the kitchen of the Knight home and began firing. After fatally shooting Knight, young Griffin turned his revolver upon his mother and inflicted several wounds, none of which are expected to result fatally. With six bullet wounds in her limbs, she crawled 200 yards through rain and mud to a tenant house seeking succor.

The crime really occurred in the White Marsh section of Nansemond county and not in the city of Suffolk. Knight had been a tenant on the Griffin farm before the death of Griffin and about three weeks ago he married Mrs. Knight, whose husband had been dead six months. The slayer has not yet been given a hearing, but it is already apparent that the defence will be that he had become mentally unbalanced. A former will drawn by his father gave the mother a life interest in the estate, but subsequently the elder Griffin drew another disinheriting the son, for reasons not known. The son is said to have bitterly resented his mother's early marriage, but the indications are that his failure to secure a legacy from his father embittered him against his mother and the man she subsequently married.

It may be timely to say in this connection that it is deplorable how many families are divided and embittered and aroused to hatred and jealousy of each other as a result of the disposition of estates. Sometimes it seems unfortunate that a father leaves an estate when one considers the consequences and particularly when the bitterness engendered in the division is recalled. In other cases children scheme to win the larger share of the paternal estate, and there is reason to believe that they sometimes resort to actual crime to secure an undue proportion of it. It would be wiser in many instances if a father divided the bulk of his estate before his death. The decadence of old-fashioned family affection and the development of avarice and greed are growing more noteworthy in recent years.

DRAKES BRANCH, March 7.—(Grapevine Wireless).—In a pink and perfumed envelope, addressed to the contributor (printed below), addressed to the conductor of this colyum. It is woman's stuff, but our guess is that it was written by a man, probably Phil Armstrong. No lady would go so far in appraising the female of the species. Here it is, judge for yourself, gentle reader.
Woman, Lovely Woman.
Where is the clinging vine of the old days? I pause to hear an answer. Where is the little frail, weak, tremble-with-delight-if-you-gave-her-a-smile-and-tremble-with-fear-at-your-first-look woman?
Where is she?
She is no more.
She may have existed in your grandmother's day but she is no longer conspicuous in the world.
These days lovely woman has shaken off the shackles that bound her and has taken her place along side of the men in every line.
She goes to parliament, she goes to congress, she is mayor of a town, she is an officer in the army and navy and she even takes her gun on her shoulder and goes to the front along with the men.
I fear the clinging vine type will never be seen on the face of the earth again, for women have risen up on her feet and demanded her rights. She is going to keep them, too, or lick the socks off mere man to defend them.
The world is becoming feminized.
Or rather you might say the women have become masculinized and dominant in the world.
It won't be long before we have a woman president of the United States. Where do you get that clinging vine stuff?

Old Pug Amazed At Mighty Purses
LONDON, March 6.—British prizefighters of the eighties watch the purses announced for the battles of the twenties and ask how they get that way.
The fight ring 42 years ago they used to have in those days—was hardly the place for a man to earn a living. One of the best of them then, "Gentleman Jack" Massey, sits by today and compares his own career with a Dempsey or Carpenter with just a little envy.
Fighting was just a sideline to him and the ill-fated of most of the contests pre-empted great inconvenience to get a scrap.
"Gentleman Jack" almost got to America for a try with the champion, John J. Sullivan. He was picked as a heavy favorite in "starting out" competition, but unluckily lost in the semi-finals, Charlie Mitchell winning the honor.
A memorable fight of Massey's was one with Jack Burke, his winner's end of the purse being a $200 cup.
Later he attempted what no fighter has done in years. He made three matches at the same time for $250 a side each. One of the bouts was secretly arranged in Sussex. Massey broke his wrist in the twenty-second round, but fought another 20 rounds before retiring.
Then came the second bout of the series at Epsom. The police got wind of the affair and, to avoid notice, the contestants and supporters journeyed down at night, disguised as furniture movers. The police, however, raided the ring and arrested all present. Heavy fines followed. The third affair came off without mishap, Massey winning easily, and returning to his work at Smithfield Market.
"Gentleman Jack" is extremely proud of his career, but he can't quite see why fighting should be rewarded with diamonds and automobiles.

HAYS BEGINS DUTIES AS HEAD OF THE MOVIES
NEW YORK, March 6.—Will H. Hays, former postmaster general, took up his duties today as executive president of the Motion Picture Manufacturers' and Distributors' Association. He spent the first day in his sumptuous new offices receiving best wishes of leading motion picture producers, reading sheafs of congratulatory telegrams and admiring bouquets sent in by friends.
Mr. Hays denied he had been employed to bolster the industry against attacks in its morality, asserting the following two clauses from his contract told the whole story of his duties:
"To obtain and then to maintain the highest possible standards of moving picture production."
"To develop to the highest possible degree the moral and educational character of the industry."

Griffin Cut His Son Off In Last Will
That's what the White Marsh road neighbors say about the Griffin-Knight tragedy. Otherwise they are reticent.
Young men friends of Courtney Griffin in Suffolk declared he had brooded over "wrongs," was hampered by debts—many of them caused by illness in a young and growing family—and that he bitterly resented his mother's marriage within six months after his father's death. It is known to have expressed himself concerning his father's last will.
When the scene of the crime is visited, one wonders how Mrs. Knight ever had the fortitude to crawl through a scorching rain-suffering through the stable yard in water and mud and 200 yards down the road to her tenant house to get help.
In the dining room are the bloodstains that show where Mr. Knight died. He was shot while standing in the kitchen, and evidently staggered back and fell in the dining room, which opens into the kitchen. His head struck the foot of the dining table, and bloodstains are visible, although the matting on the floor has been scrubbed.
On the back porch patches of blood show where Mrs. Knight fell before bullets fired by her son. She was evidently standing close to the kitchen door.

GOOSE DRIVES ROOSTER TO TAKE HIS OWN LIFE
FEDERALSBURG, Md., March 6.—Mark Wright for some time has owned a pompous Shanghai rooster. Lately he purchased a handsome Rhode Island Red rooster. At the same time his neighbor, Edward E. Little, stabled in his back yard a large goose with raucous voice.
To the chagrin of the Shanghai rooster, whenever he started to pay attention to the hens the Rhode Island Red would launch a drive on him with bill and spurs, and at every humiliating defeat the goose would emit derisive honks which goaded the Shanghai to desperation. At last the subdued rooster would run when the enemy appeared, and always the goose would triumph. Finally, according to Mr. Wright, the dejected Shanghai flew to the top of the fence, stuck his head between two palings and jumped off, breaking his neck.

THE VENGEANCE OF HENRY JARROMAN
BY ROY VICKERS

SYNOPSIS
The first installment of this thrilling mystery story was published Tuesday. Start reading it today.
Henry Jarroman, 48 years old, has just been released from prison, to which he was sentenced for the murder of Charles Theed, the solicitor, who bungled his defense at his trial twenty years ago.

A FRIEND BETRAYED HIM.
"There, my dear Jarroman," Theed was saying some half an hour later, "that completes the formalities. You are now master of your own estate. I have given you your checkbook, and if there is anything I can do for you in a personal way to help you to settle down, be sure that you could do me no greater favor than to proffer the request."
"Thanks," said Jarroman curtly. "Do I owe you anything over and above your charges?"
For the fraction of a second only Theed hesitated. The diffident request for five thousand or so in recognition of his special services would probably have been granted. But in the last hour of his company the idea of Henry Jarroman might turn out to be worth a great deal more than five thousand pounds. He leant back in his swivel chair and looked across the polished surface of his desk at the gaunt, impassive face opposite.
"No, I thank you," he said unctuously. "I beg you not to allude to the matter or you will hurt my feelings. Try to believe me, Jarroman, that in bargaining for your interests I was not wholly animated by the thought of my legitimate commission."
In twenty years of isolation a man loses his shrewdness in judging human nature. Jarroman took the words at their face value, and became vaguely conscious that before, months him at the prison door.

He tells Jarroman he has become a rich man during his imprisonment. Jarroman surprised Theed by his lack of interest in the news, but asks Theed to let him see the lawyer to whom he was sent to prison. He refuses to allow the lawyer to speak to him of his wife.
INSTALLMENT III.
his lips or hardships and indignities without end—even twenty years of hardships and indignities. One of them is love. The other—
"The other?" whispered Theed.
Jarroman turned slowly in his chair. For the first time his eyes opened widely; they no longer brooded—they glared out, caverns of malignant light.
"Hate."
The solicitor blanched from the intensity of the emotion with which the word had been uttered.
"But, my poor friend," he protested, "you have no just cause for hatred. The judge who sentenced you—"
"Bah! I have forgotten his name," interrupted Jarroman. He was himself again, iron gray and cold as ice.
"My hate has nothing to do with a paltry maliciousness like that. Listen."
It was what Theed wanted. The more information he could accumulate, the better for his half-formed plan.
"If you feel that it would relieve your mind to confide in me, tell me everything," he said soothingly.
Again there was silence. Jarroman's brain moved slowly and relentlessly. His words were all carefully chosen. He was composing his thoughts.
"Carry your mind back to my circumstances at the time. I, too, know everything that is essential to the fact that I was intensely, foolishly, madly fond of my wife. That love helped to defeat itself; for, in order to give her everything she wanted, I made my working hours too long, so that inevitably I neglected her. I cannot believe that she was so misguided as to think that the neglect proceeded from indifference. However it was, another man wormed his way into her life, pursued her until he caught her in that unguarded moment from which there could be no retreat. Her manner changed towards me. She became furtive. My suspicions were aroused, but they were aroused against the wrong man. I thought her lover was Charles Eddis."
"They used that at the trial to prove the motive. You know well enough what happened. I received an anonymous telephone call to say that my wife was with Eddis in his room. I hurried round there to catch her—and the jury found that I killed Eddis when I got there. I did not. For when I got there I found him dead."
Jarroman leant back in his chair. It was as if he were endeavoring to relax, to give his body at least some little ease, and as if that, after twenty years, had become impossible.
"You, Theed, believed me to be guilty, as the judge and jury did. There is no ill feeling on that account. You believed that the story I told of a man who snatched through the French windows as I entered the Lord's. I wonder you didn't at least realize that it was much too weak a tale to be a lie. Well, it wasn't a lie. Perhaps you believe Jarroman paused. "You believed the tale when I told it to you, but you disbelieved it after the trial—didn't you? I take it that at the time you made every effort to prove that statement of mine?"
"Of course, of course," said Theed. "I employed private detectives and did everything that was humanly possible without discovering the faintest title of evidence."
"Exactly! You tried and you failed, for that man was cleverer than you and your detectives—luckier than I. I would never have caught him if he were not lucky. The irony of it! You, with freedom and money at your disposal, failed. I, a convict within six months of my being in complete prison, succeeded in getting him. I claim no credit for it. It was no cleverness of mine. I learned it through the accident of John Camden's servant getting five years for forgery."
"John Camden?" exclaimed Theed, horror in his voice.
"Ah, you've got the name," said Jarroman. "I didn't mean you to have it just then—it was a slip, but it doesn't matter. Yes, John Camden, the man who was my intimate friend. John Camden stole my wife's honor, and in doing so destroyed one of the gentlest and kindest women alive. He poisoned her nature and turned her gold into dross. He fed my suspicion against Eddis, who at least deserved my sympathy, for he was Camden's tool and go-between. I used to meet him at Eddis's rooms. But Eddis got to be too dangerous, for he knew too much. Wherefore Camden decided to kill two birds with one stone—Eddis and myself—and he succeeded."

SEEK SLAYER OF DR. SHELTON
WASHINGTON, March 6.—The American League at Peking has requested the Chinese government to take immediate action to cause the apprehension and arrest of the robber who murdered Dr. A. L. The announcement was made in a telegram yesterday addressed to the general mission board of the denomination at St. Louis.
American missionaries at Peking have an account of the murder. In 1910 an American missionary, Dr. A. L. Shelton, was murdered by a Chinese robber. When the scene of the crime is visited, one wonders how Mrs. Knight ever had the fortitude to crawl through a scorching rain-suffering through the stable yard in water and mud and 200 yards down the road to her tenant house to get help.

GOOSE DRIVES ROOSTER TO TAKE HIS OWN LIFE
FEDERALSBURG, Md., March 6.—Mark Wright for some time has owned a pompous Shanghai rooster. Lately he purchased a handsome Rhode Island Red rooster. At the same time his neighbor, Edward E. Little, stabled in his back yard a large goose with raucous voice.
To the chagrin of the Shanghai rooster, whenever he started to pay attention to the hens the Rhode Island Red would launch a drive on him with bill and spurs, and at every humiliating defeat the goose would emit derisive honks which goaded the Shanghai to desperation. At last the subdued rooster would run when the enemy appeared, and always the goose would triumph. Finally, according to Mr. Wright, the dejected Shanghai flew to the top of the fence, stuck his head between two palings and jumped off, breaking his neck.

THE VENGEANCE OF HENRY JARROMAN
BY ROY VICKERS

SYNOPSIS
The first installment of this thrilling mystery story was published Tuesday. Start reading it today.
Henry Jarroman, 48 years old, has just been released from prison, to which he was sentenced for the murder of Charles Theed, the solicitor, who bungled his defense at his trial twenty years ago.

A FRIEND BETRAYED HIM.
"There, my dear Jarroman," Theed was saying some half an hour later, "that completes the formalities. You are now master of your own estate. I have given you your checkbook, and if there is anything I can do for you in a personal way to help you to settle down, be sure that you could do me no greater favor than to proffer the request."
"Thanks," said Jarroman curtly. "Do I owe you anything over and above your charges?"
For the fraction of a second only Theed hesitated. The diffident request for five thousand or so in recognition of his special services would probably have been granted. But in the last hour of his company the idea of Henry Jarroman might turn out to be worth a great deal more than five thousand pounds. He leant back in his swivel chair and looked across the polished surface of his desk at the gaunt, impassive face opposite.
"No, I thank you," he said unctuously. "I beg you not to allude to the matter or you will hurt my feelings. Try to believe me, Jarroman, that in bargaining for your interests I was not wholly animated by the thought of my legitimate commission."
In twenty years of isolation a man loses his shrewdness in judging human nature. Jarroman took the words at their face value, and became vaguely conscious that before, months him at the prison door.

He tells Jarroman he has become a rich man during his imprisonment. Jarroman surprised Theed by his lack of interest in the news, but asks Theed to let him see the lawyer to whom he was sent to prison. He refuses to allow the lawyer to speak to him of his wife.

his lips or hardships and indignities without end—even twenty years of hardships and indignities. One of them is love. The other—
"The other?" whispered Theed.
Jarroman turned slowly in his chair. For the first time his eyes opened widely; they no longer brooded—they glared out, caverns of malignant light.
"Hate."
The solicitor blanched from the intensity of the emotion with which the word had been uttered.
"But, my poor friend," he protested, "you have no just cause for hatred. The judge who sentenced you—"
"Bah! I have forgotten his name," interrupted Jarroman. He was himself again, iron gray and cold as ice.
"My hate has nothing to do with a paltry maliciousness like that. Listen."
It was what Theed wanted. The more information he could accumulate, the better for his half-formed plan.
"If you feel that it would relieve your mind to confide in me, tell me everything," he said soothingly.
Again there was silence. Jarroman's brain moved slowly and relentlessly. His words were all carefully chosen. He was composing his thoughts.
"Carry your mind back to my circumstances at the time. I, too, know everything that is essential to the fact that I was intensely, foolishly, madly fond of my wife. That love helped to defeat itself; for, in order to give her everything she wanted, I made my working hours too long, so that inevitably I neglected her. I cannot believe that she was so misguided as to think that the neglect proceeded from indifference. However it was, another man wormed his way into her life, pursued her until he caught her in that unguarded moment from which there could be no retreat. Her manner changed towards me. She became furtive. My suspicions were aroused, but they were aroused against the wrong man. I thought her lover was Charles Eddis."
"They used that at the trial to prove the motive. You know well enough what happened. I received an anonymous telephone call to say that my wife was with Eddis in his room. I hurried round there to catch her—and the jury found that I killed Eddis when I got there. I did not. For when I got there I found him dead."
Jarroman leant back in his chair. It was as if he were endeavoring to relax, to give his body at least some little ease, and as if that, after twenty years, had become impossible.
"You, Theed, believed me to be guilty, as the judge and jury did. There is no ill feeling on that account. You believed that the story I told of a man who snatched through the French windows as I entered the Lord's. I wonder you didn't at least realize that it was much too weak a tale to be a lie. Well, it wasn't a lie. Perhaps you believe Jarroman paused. "You believed the tale when I told it to you, but you disbelieved it after the trial—didn't you? I take it that at the time you made every effort to prove that statement of mine?"
"Of course, of course," said Theed. "I employed private detectives and did everything that was humanly possible without discovering the faintest title of evidence."
"Exactly! You tried and you failed, for that man was cleverer than you and your detectives—luckier than I. I would never have caught him if he were not lucky. The irony of it! You, with freedom and money at your disposal, failed. I, a convict within six months of my being in complete prison, succeeded in getting him. I claim no credit for it. It was no cleverness of mine. I learned it through the accident of John Camden's servant getting five years for forgery."
"John Camden?" exclaimed Theed, horror in his voice.
"Ah, you've got the name," said Jarroman. "I didn't mean you to have it just then—it was a slip, but it doesn't matter. Yes, John Camden, the man who was my intimate friend. John Camden stole my wife's honor, and in doing so destroyed one of the gentlest and kindest women alive. He poisoned her nature and turned her gold into dross. He fed my suspicion against Eddis, who at least deserved my sympathy, for he was Camden's tool and go-between. I used to meet him at Eddis's rooms. But Eddis got to be too dangerous, for he knew too much. Wherefore Camden decided to kill two birds with one stone—Eddis and myself—and he succeeded."

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The American League at Peking has requested the Chinese government to take immediate action to cause the apprehension and arrest of the robber who murdered Dr. A. L. The robber was a member of the Chinese church of the Disciples of Christ. First news of his death was received in a telegram yesterday addressed to the general mission board of the denomination at St. Louis.

Today's Fashion Hints

Smart Togs For Misses

BY MARIAN HALE
NEW YORK, March 7.—Summer togs for the little miss of 7 or 8 are quite as smart as those designed for her mother. The same loose beltings and cleverly cut and tailored collars are found on her coats, and her hats, just as are mother's, are procurable in the very fabrics of which her frocks and wraps are made. The costuming of the small girl is a delight and an art.

A popular fabric for the fashioning of girls' wraps and hats is En Tour, which is used for the model shown. En Tour is of medium weight and turns the dust nicely.

PEAKE BROUGHT BACK TO WINSTON

WINSTON-SALEM, March 6.—Having given up his fight against extradition from Knoxville, Tenn., to Winston-Salem where he is under indictment charging him with murder of H. B. Ashburn, an insurance agent, J. L. Peake arrived in this city this afternoon accompanied by a lieutenant of the local police.

Miss N. C. Phillips, of the Western Union Telegraph company's office in Greensboro, on being confronted with Peake, said, according to police, that without doubt he was the man who sent the telegram from Greensboro, requesting Ashburn to be in his office here on the night of the murder.

Interviewed in the city jail today, Peake denied any connection with the crime and declared that he had witnesses to show that he was in Knoxville when Ashburn was killed.

Name "London" comes from two Celtic words, "lyn," meaning lake, and "dun," a fort.

Where 13 Died In Bus Crash

Thirteen persons were killed when a New York Central flyer hit an intercity jitney bus on a grade crossing near Cleveland. The picture of the scene of the wreck shows how completely the big bus was demolished. Not one of the 19 passengers escaped death or injury.

"OLD MAID" GAME GETS FAMILY INTO TROUBLE

NEW YORK, March 6.—A general fight after a particularly savage session of "old maid"—hitherto little identified with brawls over cards—tonight landed Louis Friedman, 33, in magistrates' court with most of his family and several outsiders appearing as complainants.

From underneath voluminous head bandages, Friedman admitted to the judge who could only see his eyes, that he was the defendant. His wife, Molly, his son Benjamin and Harry Mannes, his stepson, told the court the head of the house had broken up the game when he "beat the old maid."

All exhibited wounds in their testimony to the heat of the fight that followed.

Charged with felonious assault, the older Friedman was held in $1,000 bail for examination tomorrow.

MELLON OPPOSES PROHIBITION NAVY

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Arrangements for establishment of a "prohibition navy" of anti-smuggling cutters to hunt liquor runners off the Atlantic coast were made without the approval of Secretary Mellon and may be cancelled by him. It was said last night at prohibition enforcement headquarters that arrangements had been completed to borrow from the navy department nine submarine cutters not in service with the coast guard to be used in enforcing the dry laws. Secretary Mellon today, however, was said to have taken the view that Congress had not authorized the use of prohibition enforcement appropriations for upkeep of vessels and that navy law enforcement lacked authority to use them as liquor chasers.

Drunkenness It Not Cause for Removal

LITTLE ROCK, March 6.—The Supreme court today held that drunkenness was not sufficient cause for removal from office and has issued a writ of prohibition against Circuit Judge Joseph H. Phillips, from removing from office Sheriff John G. Harrison of Lincoln county as part of punishment under a recent conviction on a charge of inebriety.

SANCHEZ AT MEXICO CITY.

MEXICO CITY, March 6.—Jesús Maria Sanchez, former governor of the State of Puebla, who was ousted from office by a vote of the Legislature after disturbances in which several deputies were killed, is reported to be in Mexico City attempting to arrange his tangled affairs.

Sanchez for several days had been reported to be hiding in the Puebla mountains, but the morning newspaper today says he is in the capital. His adherents in Puebla are seeking to have him returned to membership in the Chamber of Deputies, where he would be immune from arrest on charges of being implicated in murders in Puebla.

Froilan Marquez has been installed as governor of Puebla, and the Legislature, which had been in training since its return from the regular legislative session in Puebla.

Monometer Is New Invention

WASHINGTON, March 6.—A new monometer instrument for recording pressure on wing and tail surfaces of airplanes, at different points, which has been designed and developed by P. H. Norton, an engineer of the Langley Laboratory, a Langley field, it was announced today by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

The first experiments were undertaken by the laboratory for the Navy Department in order to determine the distribution of pressure over the horizontal tail surfaces of an airplane in order to realize the relation of this pressure to structural loads and longitudinal stability and were conducted on full size airplanes in the air and on models in the wind tunnel. The old method consisted in using a horizontal tail surface inside of which rubber tubes connected with a series of holes on the surface led to a multiple liquid manometer. The several tubes of the manometer registered the pressure at each of a series of points on the surface and the results were recorded by an automatic camera which photographed the height of the liquid in the tubes every few seconds.

To study various pressures in accelerated flights or "stunting" it was impossible to use the old liquid manometer and consequently the new monometer was developed substituting the deflection of metal diaphragms and a means of automatically recording their deflection for the liquid manometer and the camera respectively.

Among the result achieved by the investigations are:

That the low average load per square foot on the usual type of tail plane doing steady flight is so small that it could not in any conceivable way cause failure.

That the records taken of the same pressures on tail surfaces in accelerated flights demonstrated that there was no large increase in these forces.

A complete monometer for making pressure distribution tests has been sent to the army air service engineering laboratory at McCook field, Dayton, Ohio, for experiment by army experts.

It was also learned today that the Langley laboratory contemplates a further study to ascertain the pressure on different parts of wing and tail surfaces at very high speed in the future. In an effort to learn if possible the causes of several accidents which occurred in aviation races where the planes were making very high speeds and for which no cause has ever been determined.

Romantic Diamond Is Purchased by Chinese

LONDON, March 7.—The massive diamond which once dazzled the eyes of admirers of Gaby Deslys has passed into the hands of a wealthy Chinese, according to dispatches received here from Shanghai.

Recently the jewel was taken from Paris to China, where it was shown to a select group and eventually purchased for approximately $60,000 by a wealthy Chinese.

Although rivers of Siberia are frozen solid to the bottom at certain times of the year, the fishes maintain their vitality.

BABY MARIE OSBURNE COMING

Diminutive Movie Star to Make Personal Appearance Here

Baby Marie Osburne, possibly the most unusual movie child in pictures is scheduled to appear at The Broadway Theatre next Thursday. She has been on the present tour 11 months, but that she was quite ready to return to her native State of California and get busy starting her 19th picture.

The little lassie will appear at the Broadway afternoon and night her first appearance being at 4 o'clock, Thursday afternoon. She likes little girls and boys especially boys, she says and she will be sadly disappointed if just oodles of them are not present.

As for her appearance on the stage, she plans to sing a couple of songs and to dance a little bit. She is not a mere child, she states last night. Prior to that time her mother and father had an animal show, crocodiles, bears, logs and all sorts of animals, some good and some bad, some ugly and some pretty. And Marie liked them all, except the crocodiles.

The thing that worries her just now is eating. Only when she has been very good is she allowed an apple and then only a mighty little bit. Her menu at all times mainly consists of vegetables and fruits. And when she snuggled her shoulders as she told how she dislikes cabbage and turnips one could rather easily see why she has been a success in the movies for she has a manner of facial expression uncommon to say the least.

In addition to appearing at 4 o'clock in the afternoon she will be seen on the Broadway stage at 8 and 10 o'clock at night.

The meeting of the Danville W. C. T. U. which was called off on account of the recent rain and sleet will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at Mount Vernon church. All members are requested to attend and help plan for the coming county convention, which will be held at the First Baptist church.
